

They Do the Public Service
and They Grow.

172,986 "Wants"

Were Published in THE WORLD during the First Quarter of 1890.

165,365

During First Quarter of 1889.

PRICE ONE CENT.

THAT COMPOSITE NOVEL.

THE PRIZE SECOND CHAPTER OF THE

SUNDAY WORLD'S

UNIQUE LITERARY FEATURE ENTITLED

THE MYSTERY OF A NEW YORK HOUSE.

LAST EDITION MURDERER SMILER CAUGHT.

Revolver in Hand H. Was Entering
His Second Wife's House.

He Had Two Wives Besides the One
He Killed.

Harris A. Smiler, better known as Harry Smiler, who murdered his wife, or one of his wives, at 284 Seventh avenue last night, was arrested shortly after 1 o'clock this morning by Captain Grant and his officers
just in time to prevent another murder.

He was waiting at the house of another of his wives—at present he is known to have had three, and all the returns may not be in yet—violently drunk, and with the pistol
that had taken one life recharged and ready
for more bloody work.

To-morrow Smiler will be thirty-two years
old. From appearances he is a born tough, low-sized, sullen and with the hang-dog
look of a beaten cur.

Three years ago he was a soldier in the Salvation Army, stationed at the White street barracks, and since he stepped out of the ranks he has worked in the mail and departments of several newspapers.

June 14 he married the Widow Maggie
Drane, whom he had known two years.

They were married in a Mission on Thirtieth street by the Rev. Dr. Binnet. Forthwith
he began to mistreat the woman, who was not his wife, for he had then already married two other women and in his turn
he had been married.

Smiler and his latest wife lived at 11 Prince street, and within three months he was arrested for the murder of his first wife, who was named Mrs. Wilson. He was arrested at the Mulberry street police station for assault upon the woman.

Once, on the street, he beat her black and blue in the public street, and was again
arrested and set free.

When Smiler broke out she used to seek shelter with a friend, the Widow Wilson, who lives on the top floor of 284 Seventh avenue.

Tuesday night she came there for the tenth or twelfth time, and there the murder
was committed. She was lying on the door shortly before 11 o'clock and demanded of Mrs. Wilson if his wife was there.

She heard him in the next room, and said "No, but too late. Smiler crowded in, and she tried to escape into another room. Her executioner blocked the way.

"Put on your things and come with me,"
he said.

The woman pleaded to be allowed to stay;
begged Smiler to protect her. She screamed for help.

Smiler was inexorable.

"Come on," he said. But she would not go and clung to the widow in a paroxysm
of terror.

Mrs. Wilson finally told him to let his wife stay and return to her room.

Without another word he drew his pistol
and emptied it into the trembling woman's back, where she was leaning over the door leading to another room, in which she had sought to hide herself.

She fell with a shriek in the room, two
in the breast and a fourth in the right arm.
Mrs. Wilson ran for a policeman. When she returned with Officer Collins, of the Sixteenth Precinct, Mrs. Smiler lay dead on the floor and the murderer was gone.

Capt. Grant started out with Detectives Early and Logan and a squad of police in pursuit of the murderer.

He had called the force in the yard and got out at Twenty-fifth street. At 155 West Twenty-fifth street, Officer Collins, of the Sixteenth Precinct, was waiting for him.

He is janitor of the house.

The murderer had been there an hour before, threatening a girl and threatening murder if he found his wife.

Capt. Grant set a watch on the house, 441
West Twenty-fifth street, where lived Mrs.
Smiler No. 2, Elizabeth Galt, whom he married six years ago and deserted to marry
the Widow Drane.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Smiler came along.
He had just fired up with courage with a drink in the saloon on the corner, and had reloaded his pistol there.

The police caught him going into the house. He showed fight, but was quickly subdued and taken to the West Twentieth street police station.

Off the station he claimed to know nothing about the murder, but said that his wife drank and made trouble. When told that she was dead, he said indifferently: "Well, she was."

All right, then I will hang. Bury me in the same grave with her."

A special watch was set upon him in his cell to prevent any attempt at suicide.

Life No. 1 is Maggie Galt, who lives in
One Hundred and Eighteenth street, and whom he deserted for the Galt woman.

He was arraigned before Justice White in
the Jefferson Market Court this morning
and held to await the verdict of the Coroner's jury.

They Do the Public Service
and They Grow.

172,986 "Wants"

Were Published in THE WORLD during
the First Quarter of 1890.

165,365

During First Quarter of 1889.

PRICE ONE CENT.

THAT COMPOSITE NOVEL.

THE PRIZE SECOND CHAPTER OF THE

SUNDAY WORLD'S

UNIQUE LITERARY FEATURE ENTITLED

THE MYSTERY OF A NEW YORK HOUSE.

LAST EDITION MURDERER SMILER CAUGHT.

Revolver in Hand H. Was Entering
His Second Wife's House.

He Had Two Wives Besides the One
He Killed.

Harris A. Smiler, better known as Harry Smiler, who murdered his wife, or one of
his wives, at 284 Seventh avenue last night,
was arrested shortly after 1 o'clock this morning by Captain Grant and his officers
just in time to prevent another murder.

He was waiting at the house of another of
his wives—at present he is known to have
had three, and all the returns may not be in
yet—violently drunk, and with the pistol
that had taken one life recharged and ready
for more bloody work.

To-morrow Smiler will be thirty-two years
old. From appearances he is a born tough,
low-sized, sullen and with the hang-dog
look of a beaten cur.

Three years ago he was a soldier in the Salvation Army, stationed at the White
street barracks, and since he stepped out of
the ranks he has worked in the mail and
departments of several newspapers.

June 14 he married the Widow Maggie
Drane, whom he had known two years.

They were married in a Mission on Thirtieth
street by the Rev. Dr. Binnet. Forthwith
he began to mistreat the woman, who was
not his wife, for he had then already
married two other women and in his turn
he had been married.

Smiler and his latest wife lived at 11 Prince street, and within three months he was arrested for the murder of his first wife,
who was named Mrs. Wilson. He was arrested at the Mulberry street police station for assault upon the woman.

Once, on the street, he beat her black and
blue in the public street, and was again
arrested and set free.

When Smiler broke out she used to seek
shelter with a friend, the Widow Wilson,
who lives on the top floor of 284 Seventh
avenue.

Tuesday night she came there for the
tenth or twelfth time, and there the murder
was committed. She was lying on the door shortly before 11 o'clock and demanded of Mrs. Wilson if his wife was there.

She heard him in the next room, and
said "No, but too late. Smiler crowded
in, and she tried to escape into another
room. Her executioner blocked the way.

"Put on your things and come with me,"
he said.

The woman pleaded to be allowed to stay;
begged Smiler to protect her. She
screamed for help.

Smiler was inexorable.

"Come on," he said. But she would not go and clung to the widow in a paroxysm
of terror.

Mrs. Wilson finally told him to let his wife stay and return to her room.

Without another word he drew his pistol
and emptied it into the trembling woman's
back, where she was leaning over the
door leading to another room, in which she
had sought to hide herself.

She fell with a shriek in the room, two
in the breast and a fourth in the right arm.
Mrs. Wilson ran for a policeman. When she returned with Officer Collins, of the Sixteenth Precinct, Mrs. Smiler lay dead on the floor and the murderer was gone.

Capt. Grant started out with Detectives Early and Logan and a squad of
police in pursuit of the murderer.

He had called the force in the yard and got out
at Twenty-fifth street. At 155 West Twenty-fifth street, Officer Collins, of the Sixteenth Precinct, was waiting for him.

He is janitor of the house.

The murderer had been there an hour before, threatening a girl and threatening
murder if he found his wife.

Capt. Grant set a watch on the house, 441
West Twenty-fifth street, where lived Mrs.
Smiler No. 2, Elizabeth Galt, whom he married six years ago and deserted to marry
the Widow Drane.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Smiler came along.
He had just fired up with courage with a drink in the saloon on the corner, and had
reloaded his pistol there.

The police caught him going into the
house. He showed fight, but was quickly
subdued and taken to the West Twentieth
street police station.

Off the station he claimed to know nothing
about the murder, but said that his wife drank and
made trouble. When told that she was dead,
he said indifferently: "Well, she was."

All right, then I will hang. Bury me in
the same grave with her."

A special watch was set upon him in his
cell to prevent any attempt at suicide.

Life No. 1 is Maggie Galt, who lives in
One Hundred and Eighteenth street, and
whom he deserted for the Galt woman.

He was arraigned before Justice White in
the Jefferson Market Court this morning
and held to await the verdict of the Coroner's jury.

They Do the Public Service
and They Grow.

172,986 "Wants"

Were Published in THE WORLD during
the First Quarter of 1890.

165,365

During First Quarter of 1889.

PRICE ONE CENT.

THAT COMPOSITE NOVEL.

THE PRIZE SECOND CHAPTER OF THE

SUNDAY WORLD'S

UNIQUE LITERARY FEATURE ENTITLED

THE MYSTERY OF A NEW YORK HOUSE.

LAST EDITION MURDERER SMILER CAUGHT.

Revolver in Hand H. Was Entering
His Second Wife's House.

He Had Two Wives Besides the One
He Killed.

Harris A. Smiler, better known as Harry Smiler, who murdered his wife, or one of
his wives, at 284 Seventh avenue last night,
was arrested shortly after 1 o'clock this morning by Captain Grant and his officers
just in time to prevent another murder.

He was waiting at the house of another of
his wives—at present he is known to have
had three, and all the returns may not be in
yet—violently drunk, and with the pistol
that had taken one life recharged and ready
for more bloody work.

To-morrow Smiler will be thirty-two years
old. From appearances he is a born tough,
low-sized, sullen and with the hang-dog
look of a beaten cur.

Three years ago he was a soldier in the Salvation Army, stationed at the White
street barracks, and since he stepped out of
the ranks he has worked in the mail and
departments of several newspapers.

June 14 he married the Widow Maggie
Drane, whom he had known two years.

They were married in a Mission on Thirtieth
street by the Rev. Dr. Binnet. Forthwith
he began to mistreat the woman, who was
not his wife, for he had then already
married two other women and in his turn
he had been married.

Smiler and his latest wife lived at 11 Prince street, and within three months he was arrested for the murder of his first wife,
who was named Mrs. Wilson. He was arrested at the Mulberry street police station for assault upon the woman.

Once, on the street, he beat her black and
blue in the public street, and was again
arrested and set free.

When Smiler broke out she used to seek
shelter with a friend, the Widow Wilson,
who lives on the top floor of 284 Seventh
avenue.

Tuesday night she came there for the
tenth or twelfth time, and there the murder
was committed. She was lying on the door shortly before 11 o'clock and demanded of Mrs. Wilson if his wife was there.

She heard him in the next room, and
said "No, but too late. Smiler crowded
in, and she tried to escape into another
room. Her executioner blocked the way.

"Put on your things and come with me,"
he said.

The woman pleaded to be allowed to stay;
begged Smiler to protect her. She
screamed for help.

Smiler was inexorable.

"Come on," he said. But she would not go and clung to the widow in a paroxysm
of terror.

Mrs. Wilson finally told him to let his wife stay and return to her room.

Without another word he drew his pistol
and emptied it into the trembling woman's
back, where she was leaning over the
door leading to another room, in which she
had sought to hide herself.

She fell with a shriek in the room, two
in the breast and a fourth in the right arm.
Mrs. Wilson ran for a policeman. When she returned with Officer Collins, of the Sixteenth Precinct, Mrs. Smiler lay dead on the floor and the murderer was gone.

Capt. Grant started out with Detectives Early and Logan and a squad of
police in pursuit of the murderer.

He had called the force in the yard and got out
at Twenty-fifth street. At 155 West Twenty-fifth street, Officer Collins, of the Sixteenth Precinct, was waiting for him.

He is janitor of the house.

The murderer had been there an hour before, threatening a girl and threatening
murder if he found his wife.

Capt. Grant set a watch on the house, 441
West Twenty-fifth street, where lived Mrs.
Smiler No. 2, Elizabeth Galt, whom he married six years ago and deserted to marry
the Widow Drane.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Smiler came along.
He had just fired up with courage with a drink in the saloon on the corner, and had
reloaded his pistol there.

The police caught him going into the
house. He showed fight, but was quickly
subdued and taken to the West Twentieth
street police station.

Off the station he claimed to know nothing
about the murder, but said that his wife drank and
made trouble. When told that she was dead,
he said indifferently: "Well, she was."

All right, then I will hang. Bury me in
the same grave with her."

A special watch was set upon him in his
cell to prevent any attempt at suicide.

Life No. 1 is Maggie Galt, who lives in
One Hundred and Eighteenth street, and
whom he deserted for the Galt woman.

He was arraigned before Justice White in
the Jefferson Market Court this morning
and held to await the verdict of the Coroner's jury.

They Do the Public Service
and They Grow.

172,986 "Wants"

Were Published in THE WORLD during
the First Quarter of 1890.

165,365

During First Quarter of 1889.

PRICE ONE CENT.

THAT COMPOSITE NOVEL.

THE PRIZE SECOND CHAPTER OF THE

SUNDAY WORLD'S

UNIQUE LITERARY FEATURE ENTITLED

THE MYSTERY OF A NEW YORK HOUSE.

LAST EDITION MURDERER SMILER CAUGHT.

Revolver in Hand H. Was Entering
His Second Wife's House.

He Had Two Wives Besides the One
He Killed.

Harris A. Smiler, better known as Harry Smiler, who murdered his wife, or one of
his wives, at 284 Seventh avenue last night,
was arrested shortly after 1 o'clock this morning by Captain Grant and his officers
just in time to prevent another murder.

He was waiting at the house of another of
his wives—at present he is known to have
had three, and all the returns may not be in
yet—violently drunk, and with the pistol
that had taken one life recharged and ready
for more bloody work.

To-morrow Smiler will be thirty-two years
old. From appearances he is a born tough,
low-sized, sullen and with the hang-dog
look of a beaten cur.

Three years ago he was a soldier in the Salvation Army, stationed at the White
street barracks, and since he stepped out of
the ranks he has worked in the mail and
departments of several newspapers.

June 14 he married the Widow Maggie
Drane, whom he had known two years.

They were married in a Mission on Thirtieth
street by the Rev. Dr. Binnet. Forthwith
he began to mistreat the woman, who was
not his wife, for he had then already
married two other women and in his turn
he had been married.

Smiler and his latest wife lived at 11 Prince street, and within three months he was arrested for the murder of his first wife,
who was named Mrs. Wilson. He was arrested at the Mulberry street police station for assault upon the woman.

Once, on the street, he beat her black and
blue in the public street, and was again
arrested and set free.

When Smiler broke out she used to seek
shelter with a friend, the Widow Wilson,
who lives on the top floor of 284 Seventh
avenue.

Tuesday night she came there for the
tenth or twelfth time, and there the murder
was committed. She was lying on the door shortly before 11 o'clock and demanded of Mrs. Wilson if his wife was there.

She heard him in the next room, and
said "No, but too late. Smiler crowded
in, and she tried to escape into another
room. Her executioner blocked the way.

"Put on your things and come with me,"
he said.

The woman pleaded to be allowed to stay;
begged Smiler to protect her. She
screamed for help.

Smiler was inexorable.

"Come on," he said. But she would not go and clung to the widow in a paroxysm
of terror.

Mrs. Wilson finally told him to let his wife stay and return to her room.

Without another word he drew his pistol
and emptied it into the trembling woman's
back, where she was leaning over the
door leading to another room, in which she
had sought to hide herself.

She fell with a shriek in the room, two
in the breast and a fourth in the right arm.
Mrs. Wilson ran for a policeman. When
she returned with Officer Collins, of the Sixteenth Precinct, Mrs. Smiler lay dead on the floor and the murderer was gone.

Capt. Grant started out with Detectives Early and Logan and a squad of
police in pursuit of the murderer.

He had called the force in the yard and got out
at Twenty-fifth street. At 155 West Twenty-fifth street, Officer Collins, of the Sixteenth Precinct, was waiting for him.

He is janitor of the house.

The murderer had been there an hour before, threatening a girl and threatening
murder if he found his wife.

Capt. Grant set a watch on the house, 441
West Twenty-fifth street, where lived Mrs.
Smiler No. 2, Elizabeth Galt, whom he married six years ago and deserted to marry
the Widow Drane.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Smiler came along.
He had just fired up with courage with a drink in the saloon on the corner, and had
reloaded his pistol there.

The police caught him going into the
house. He showed fight, but was quickly
subdued and taken to the West Twentieth
street police station.

Off the station he claimed to know nothing
about the murder, but said that his wife drank and
made trouble. When told that she was dead,
he said indifferently: "Well, she was."

All right, then I will hang. Bury me in
the same grave with her."

A special watch was set upon him in his
cell to prevent any attempt at suicide.

Life No. 1 is Maggie Galt, who lives in
One Hundred and Eighteenth street, and
whom he deserted for the Galt woman.

He was arraigned before Justice White in
the Jefferson Market Court this morning
and held to await the verdict of the Coroner's jury.

They Do the Public Service
and They Grow.

172,986 "Wants"

Were Published in THE WORLD during
the First Quarter of 1890.

165,365

During First Quarter of 1889.

PRICE ONE CENT.

THAT COMPOSITE NOVEL.

THE PRIZE SECOND CHAPTER OF THE

SUNDAY WORLD'S

UNIQUE LITERARY FEATURE ENTITLED

THE MYSTERY OF A NEW YORK HOUSE.

LAST EDITION MURDERER SMILER CAUGHT.

Revolver in Hand H. Was Entering
His Second Wife's House.

He Had Two Wives Besides the One
He Killed.

Harris A. Smiler, better known as Harry Smiler, who murdered his wife, or one of
his wives, at 284 Seventh avenue last night,
was arrested shortly after 1 o'clock this morning by Captain Grant and his officers
just in time to prevent another murder.

He was waiting at the house of another of
his wives—at present he is known to have
had three, and all the returns may not be in
yet—violently drunk, and with the pistol
that had taken one life recharged and ready
for more bloody work.

To-morrow Smiler will be thirty-two years
old. From appearances he is a born tough,
low-sized, sullen and with the hang-dog
look of a beaten cur.

Three years ago he was a soldier in the Salvation Army, stationed at the White
street barracks, and since he stepped out of
the ranks he has worked in the mail and
departments of several newspapers.

June 14 he married the Widow Maggie
Drane, whom he had known two years.

They were married in a Mission on Thirtieth
street by the Rev. Dr. Binnet. Forthwith
he began to mistreat the woman, who was
not his wife, for he had then already
married two other women and in his turn
he had been married.

Smiler and his latest wife lived at 11 Prince street, and within three months he was arrested for the murder of his first wife,
who was named Mrs. Wilson. He was arrested at the Mulberry street police station for assault upon the woman.

Once, on the street, he beat her black and
blue in the public street, and was again
arrested and set free.

When Smiler broke out she used to seek
shelter with a friend, the Widow Wilson,
who lives on the top floor of 284 Seventh
avenue.

Tuesday night she came there for the
tenth or twelfth time, and there the murder
was committed. She was lying on the door shortly before 11 o'clock and demanded of Mrs. Wilson if his wife was there.

She heard him in the next room, and
said "No, but too late. Smiler crowded
in, and she tried to escape into another
room. Her executioner blocked the way.

"Put on your things and come with me,"
he said.

The woman pleaded to be allowed to stay;
begged Smiler to protect her. She
screamed for help.

Smiler was inexorable.

"Come on," he said. But she would not go and clung to the widow in a paroxysm
of terror.